- DE Live Online Lecture (02S)

Instructional Techniques

Instructors may make use of lectures, discussion and oral and written feedback. Course instruction will include exposure to and discussion of current social media posts and current events.

Reading Assignments

Students will have regular reading assignments in a selected textbook as well as in newspapers, magazines, and social media. Students can expect to spend at least five hours each week reading from a variety of sources.

Writing Assignments

1. Students will write posts to an assortment of social media sites. At least five hours each week will be needed. 2. Essays and articles will be written in class in conjunction with the Coast Report. Time commitments for articles can vary but at least two or three hours per week will be needed.

Out-of-class Assignments

Students will be required to consume media outside of class and stay up to date on social media posts by news outlets. At least five hours each week will be required in reading social media posts by other media outlets.

Demonstration of Critical Thinking

By making decisions about what is appropriate to post on social media, and doing the posts, students will exhibit critical thinking skills, in addition to showing they understand when and when not to engage with readers.

Required Writing, Problem Solving, Skills Demonstration

Students will use social media to drive traffic to their personal profiles as well as the newspapers. Each post students make will require journalistic writing techniques and decision making in not only what to post and what not to post, but how to promote it. Analytics will determine the success of moving traffic through the use of social media.
